Oregon Fire Marshal suggests safety with batteries

SALEM – October is Fire Prevention Month, and the Oregon State Fire Marshal and Oregon Fire Marshals Association invite all Oregonians to Take Charge of Fire Safety by buying, using, and recycling rechargeable batteries safely.

Volume 24 No. 23

Rechargeable batteries, including lithium-ion batteries, power many of our everyday devices, such as smartphones, laptops, wearable technology, e-scooters, power tools, electric vehicles, and much more. While they are convenient and powerful, they can create serious fire risks if not used correctly.

"Rechargeable batteries, especially lithium-ion types, are incredibly useful but can be dangerous if they're not used or stored the right way," State Fire Marshal Mariana Ruiz-Temple said. "Since more families are using them at home, it's important to know how to use them safely."

"Oregon's fire service personnel see firsthand the impact fire can have on families and communities," said Lora Ratcliff, president of the Oregon Fire Marshals Association. "Fire Prevention Month is about taking simple steps that make a big difference, whether that's charging batteries safely, checking smoke alarms, or creating a home escape plan. By working together, we can reduce fire risks and help keep Oregonians safe."

Safety Tips for Rechargeable Batteries

Buy Only Listed Products. When buying devices that use rechargeable batteries, make sure they are tested and certified by a nationally recognized testing laboratory to meet established safety standards.

Charge Devices Safely. Always use the charger that comes with the device or one approved by the manufacturer. Charge devices on a hard, flat surface and avoid charging them

The City of Myrtle Creek's new visitor center is not quite open yet but last Thursday the Myrtle Creek~Tri City Area Chamber of Commerce held their general membership meeting in the new center along with giving tours of the revamped building. The new visitors center is in the old Village Realty building that sits on Main Street between the current location of Village Realty and Tommy's All American Burger Company. The city purchased the building and property in 2024 and began remodeling the facility earlier this year. There was an original targeted early summer opening but some unforeseen complications didn't allow for that to happen. The plan is to have the center open at least two days a week and staffed by volunteers from various local entities. (ABOVE) Seen here is the new center and to the right are members of the Chamber conducting the tours.

Riddle unbeaten run continues

PROSPECT - Riddle opened up their Special District 1 eight-man league schedule with a dominating win over Prospect.

Despite being a bit gracious on offense with five turnovers, three fumbles and two picks, the Irish were able to hold the Cougars at bay with a stifling defense en route to the 28-8 victory.

From the opening quarter Riddle led getting their first score of the game on a three yard run by Jonathan Harp. The conversion was good and after the first 12 minutes the Irish led 8-0.

Wolves lose sixth straight

DAYS CREEK - The Days Creek Wolves volleyball squad suffered three more losses as they fell in straight sets to visiting Umpqua Valley Christian, 25-11, 25-9, 25-3 on Tuesday, September 30, again in straight sets (3-0) to North Douglas on Thursday and on Saturday to Bandon in the South Umpqua tournament.

The Wolves were sitting at 3-3 on the season before this losing streak began and now they are at 3-9 overall and 2-4 in Skyline League play with just five matches left in the season, four of which are league matches.

Boys volleyball sanctioned as an OSAA activity

WILSONVILLE - The Delegate Assembly of the Oregon School Activities Association (OSAA) voted in boys volleyball as an OSAA-sanctioned activity at the assembly's October 6 meeting.

Boys volleyball will begin its first season as a sanctioned activity in the Spring of 2026 following two years as an emerging activity.

It is the first activity to join the association's offering since girls wrestling was voted in by the Delegate Assembly ahead of the 2023-24 association year.

Oregon is the 26th state to add boys volleyball as a sanctioned activity.

Boys volleyball is the first activity to be added through the OSAA's emerging activity process.

The process allows the growth of meaningful interscholastic participation opportunities for students in athletics and activities that have the potential to meet the required number of schools participating to be considered for official sanctioning by the OSAA.

Sixty-eight varsity teams competed last spring - Central Catholic (6A), Summit (5A), Estacada (4A) and St. Mary's, Medford (3A/2A/1A) claimed culminating event titles in May. Over the last six years, the sport has seen a 51 percent growth - the highest among boys sports - nationally, according to the American Volleyball Coaches' Association (AVCA).

World's steepest street is in Oregon City — it runs straight up

By Finn J.D. John

The cities of San Francisco and Pittsburgh are currently in a battle for bragging rights: Which town is home to the world's steepest street? Is it Canton Avenue in Pittsburgh, a 21-foot stretch of which is at a 37% grade? Or Bradford Street in San Francisco, which claims a shorter stretch as high as 39%?

Neither one, says the Guinness Book of World Records. In fact, they say, it's Baldwin Street in Dunedin, New Zealand, which is 34.8% over a longer stretch of roadbed than either American street.

This good-natured feud, with bragging rights and tourism clout on the line, is very reminiscent of the "shortest river war" between the D River in Lincoln City and the Roe River in Great Falls, Mont.

But in the battle for the bragging rights to the world's steepest street, there's simply no contest. There is no steeper slope than 90 degrees — 130 feet up, zero feet forward and that's the slope of Elevator Street in Oregon City: The world's actual steepest street.

To be clear, it may not be the only steepest street in the world. But a 90-degree slope is an infinity-percent grade. A steeper slope than that is physically impossible.

Elevator Street usually doesn't get counted in those "street steepness" contests, though, because although it is in fact a platted and recorded city street, it doesn't really look like one at all. What it does look like is a flying saucer docked on top of a thick lollipop stick, attached to the face of the 100-foot bluff that runs through downtown Oregon City.

You can't drive on it, or walk up and down. But at the height of the tourist season, as many as 1,300 people use it every day.

To do that, they ride the only municipal elevator in North America. They walk into a deep tunnel at the foot of the bluff, passing under the railroad tracks; ride to the top, a trip that takes about 15 seconds; and can then stroll out into the observation deck (the "flying saucer" part at the top) for a grand view of the town and Willamette Falls to the south.

OREGON CITY WAS one of the first settlements to spring up in the old Oregon territory, in 1829; and it was set up in a spot close by the falls so that their water power could be easily tapped. The whole town was on a great shelf of land just downstream from the falls, like an enormous garden terrace. To the west, a steep cliff dropped down to the river, smooth and lazy and very deep after its mad rush down the falls, oozing toward Portland and the sea. To the east, just a few dozen yards away, was a sheer rock wall, about 100 feet high.

It wasn't long before the settlement got too big for that shelf above the river. So people started settling at the top of the bluff. But, of course, that had its own drawbacks. A quick run into the business district to buy supplies involved a great deal of extra travel to get down the side of the bluff safely, following one of the Indian trails that the tribes had blazed. Later these were improved with staircases; but these were quite literally not for the faint of heart. Hundreds of steps were required to get to the top. (Several sources say there were more than 700 steps, although this may be an error induced by counting the total number of footsteps required to climb the trail to the top rather than the actual stairsteps themselves. But today, the direct trail up the bluff includes 197 concrete steps; so it wasn't anything to be sniffed at.)

If a resident was willing to saddle up or hitch up the buggy, she or he could ride to town via Singer Hill, to the north. But, that wasn't always convenient, and it was frustrating to have to schedule an hour or two and visit a livery stable just to get to a store a few blocks away.

By 1912, the city residents decided they had to do something about it, to bring the two halves of the city together. It wasn't just the convenience of the residents at the top, who wanted to get to town to shop; the city had outgrown that shelf of land and was starting to develop and spread out on the top. The two halves of Oregon City would have to be brought together some-

So the city presented the townsfolk with a ballot mea-

The measure was shot down at first. But on their next try, it was approved, and the voters green-lit $12,000 in bonds to get the project done. This was a time of heavy competitive growth among Oregon cities. and as the "O.G." of the lower Willamette, Oregon City was feeling a little hard pressed by upstarts like Gladstone and Milwaukie, not to mention Portland. There was a sense that the geography was holding Oregon City back, and they'd have to do something to stitch their divided town together.

sure to build an elevator at the bluff.

By the early 1910s, almost everyone agreed an elevator was needed; but almost everyone also felt that it should not be near their house. That was especially true of the wealthy and prominent families with homes at the top of the bluff, high enough above the railroad tracks to not be noisy and blessed with glorious vistas out over the valley and falls. These folks were especially adamant: "You're not ruining MY view with that horrid thing!"

Negotiations went nowhere, so finally the city had to pick a spot, at the end of Seventh Street, and start condemnation proceedings. The unlucky homeowner fought like a tiger, and the case went all the way up to the Supreme Court before being decided in the city's favor.

It seems to have left a bad taste in the homeowner's mouth, though, because for the rest of her life she refused to ever ride in the elevator.

That may have been for reasons other than petulance, though. By all accounts, riding the first Oregon City municipal elevator was a low-key terrifying experience. It consisted of a great free-standing tower of wood and steel that looked a bit like a slender grain elevator or maybe a wide church steeple, towering over the railroad tracks on the opposite side from the cliff face. Riders would get in the elevator and it would slowly start crawling upward. It was powered by water pressure, so it was excruciatingly slow — the climb of 100 feet or so took three to five minutes, so less than half the speed of a person climbing a ladder. Every now and then it would glitch out and stop; when that happened, riders would have to open a trap door in the floor and climb down to the ground along a narrow emergency

If you did make it to the top of the old elevator, your adventure wasn't over yet. There was a 35-foot catwalk stretching from the tower to the cliff face, over the railroad tracks. One imagines passengers trying not to look down, gripping the catwalk railing and mincing carefully along as smoke from a passing locomotive engine billows up around them ....

As far as I've been able to learn, nobody was ever injured or killed riding the elevator; but, plenty of people must have occasionally thought they might be the

It wasn't just the elevator's riders who had reason to be dissatisfied with it. It took 200,000 gallons of water to move the elevator car from the bottom to the top, and every time the elevator started up the shaft the surrounding homes would lose some or all water pressure for the duration. This was less of an issue in those years before showers were common, but it was certainly an inconvenience on wash day.

In spite of these drawbacks, the elevator got really popular. It was super convenient, and after one got used to the catwalk crossing over the railroad tracks and the slow lurching ride, it wasn't so bad. It was crude and a little scary, but at least it wasn't 700 steps or a trip to the livery stable!

And the town was very proud of it. On its opening day, pretty much the whole city — population, at the time, 3,869 souls — came to queue up and take a ride.

But locals were still a bit leery of it until 1924, when the city electrified it. In retrospect, it seems weird that they didn't convert it to electricity earlier; Oregon City was, for obvious geological reasons, the first town in the West to have grid electric power, clear back in 1889 when the elevator was little more than a gleam in a deamer's eye, if

Better late than never, though, as they say; and with new electric drive motors in place, the car now zoomed from bottom to top in just 30 seconds — and they were far

Still, there was that catwalk to navigate; it was generously wide, but still, that was a long way down, and it must have been at least uncomfortable to traverse it. Plus, by the 1950s, the machinery was getting pretty long in the tooth, and breakdowns were starting to be more frequent. Given that an elevator breakdown was a prelude to a hair-raising climb down a narrow ladder, people were starting to avoid using it; plus, widespread adoption of automobiles had given most of them more comfortable alternatives anyway.

So the city got approval for a replacement elevator, and put the project out for bids, specifying a plain, unadorned, timeless look. The low bid came in at $116,000; it was finished in time for the tourist season in 1955, and to say it wears its mid-century-modern architecture proudly would be an understatement! Perhaps the most important change was, the elevator was built with a tunnel at the bottom, which runs 35 feet under the railroad tracks. This enables the elevator tower to be anchored securely to the bluff rather than swaying like a skyscraper 100 feet above the city. It's a vastly more pleasant (not to mention safer) experience than the old one was. Until the COVID-19 outbreak, the elevator was staffed with an attendant; but, since then, it's been self-service. Riders walk into the tunnel at the end of Seventh Street, ride to the top, and can then continue east on Seventh Street if they want to, or stroll around the viewing platform and walk the promenade at the brow of the bluff. It's really a very nice setup, and well worth a stop if you are ever in Oregon City with an hour or two to spare.
