

Commissioners approve a drug enforcement grant for DINT

DOUGLAS COUNTY – Douglas County Commissioners are pleased to announce that earlier this week they approved the acceptance of a renewal grant for the Douglas Interagency Narcotics Team (DINT). DINT under the command of Lieutenant Rick McArthur received a grant from the Illegal Marijuana Market Enforcement Grant Program (IMMEGP). The grant, awarded by the State of Oregon through the Oregon Criminal Justice Commission (CJC), totals $1,945,652 and is the next cycle of an existing grant from the CJC that will support illegal marijuana enforcement efforts in Douglas County through August 31, 2027.

The funding will enhance DINT’s ability to investigate, disrupt, and dismantle illegal marijuana cultivation and distribution operations that pose risks to public safety, natural resources, and community well-being.

Grant funds may be used to support personnel, investigations, equipment, training, prosecution-related costs, and collaborative enforcement efforts with local, state, and federal partners.

According to the Oregon Criminal Justice Commission, the Illegal Marijuana Market Enforcement Grant Program was created in 2018 following the passage of Senate Bill 1544 by the Oregon Legislature. The program was designed to provide targeted resources to local law enforcement agencies and district attorneys’ offices to address the ongoing challenges posed by illegal marijuana activity across the state. IMMEGP assists local communities with costs incurred while addressing unlawful marijuana cultivation and distribution operations, including investigation and prosecution, as well as services for victims and survivors of labor trafficking and worker abuse.

Illegal grow operations are often associated with environmental damage, unsafe working conditions, human trafficking, and other criminal activity, making enforcement efforts critical to protecting both people and property.

Lieutenant McArthur emphasized that the grant would allow DINT to continue proactive enforcement, operational readiness while strengthening partnerships with other agencies within the boundaries of Douglas County.

“This funding gives us the tools necessary to address complex, multi-jurisdictional cases and to protect our communities from the impacts of illegal marijuana operations,” said McArthur. He also personally thanked Commissioner Freeman for his extensive work on making sure this particular grant was funded properly and awarded to the agencies in Oregon that need it most.

Commissioner Freeman noted that the grant reflects the Board’s continued confidence in DINT’s work and ongoing commitment to provide responsible and effective drug enforcement in Douglas County.

He also noted that DINT has one of the highest drug plant seizure rates in the State of Oregon.

DINT was originally formed in October 1989. The specialized unit was formed as part of a three-prong approach to substance abuse issues affecting Douglas County, Oregon. DINT is comprised of partnerships and support agencies made up of the following: Douglas County Board of Commissioners, Douglas County District Attorney’s Office, Douglas County Sheriff’s Office, Oregon National Guard, Oregon State Police, Bureau of Land Management, and the Roseburg Police Department. The unit’s primary responsibility is the investigation and enforcement of State and Federal Controlled Substance laws.

Their mission also entails training for area police and fire departments, the public, and private sector businesses.

Announcement to the readers of The Mail

For many years, our newspaper, The Douglas County Mail, has been dedicated to providing trustworthy local news, thoughtful storytelling, and a reliable voice for our community. We remain committed to that mission. However, we must also adapt to the realities facing the journalism industry today.

Like many publications across the country, we have experienced declining advertising revenues, a primary source of funding for our newsroom. At the same time, printing and postage costs have continued to rise sharply, making weekly physical production increasingly unsustainable.

After careful consideration, and in order to preserve the quality of our reporting and ensure the long-term stability of our publication, if we cannot secure some significant additional advertisers, we have transitioning to a fully virtual, digital-only platform as of January 1.

This change will allow us to continue delivering the news you rely on—more quickly, more efficiently, and without the financial strain that print distribution now imposes. Our digital edition will include all the content you’ve come to expect, with additional features made possible by an online format.

We understand this is a significant shift, and we deeply appreciate your support and understanding as we take this necessary step. Our commitment to serving our readers remains stronger than ever, and we look forward to continuing that service in our new digital home.

Thank you for being part of our community. All current subscribers are currently being entered into the system and for the month of January will have unlimited access to the website and the e-edition of the paper at demail.info.

At the end of January the access will become user name and password dependent. The Douglas County Mail staff wanted to make sure that everyone is able to access their paper so as of February your user name will be your subscriber name. That is the name that is printed on your label on the front page in the upper right hand corner.

The universal password at this point will be demail.info.

For those who have renewed your subscription for the 2026 year your access will remain until the expiration date on your label which is the date above your name.

If you have provided The Douglas County Mail with an email address you will receive a reminder before your subscription expires.

If you have not provided an email please do so to allow for the system to operate properly

If you do not wish to pay via the online method you still can renew via regular mail with a check or money order. However you will not be able to receive a reminder as in the past so please make note of your expiration date.

Offbeat Oregon History

Governor Martin’s goons were dirty but incompetent fighters

By Finn J.D. John

In August of 1937 when Stanley Doyle called on her, Gwendolyn Ramsey can’t have been too happy to see him.

Doyle had been the key figure behind framing her husband, Ernest Doyle, and two of his fellow union leaders, for the murder of a ship’s officer the year before. And although Doyle had been working undercover, chances are pretty good that she knew exactly who he was.

But what he wanted to see her about — that interested her a great deal. He was there to offer her a special deal: All she needed to do, he told her, was “sign a statement that Harry Bridges was a Communist and that she had seen him at Communist meetings.”

“All you have to do is sign it,” Doyle told her, “and your husband will be released from San Quentin.”

Ramsey wasn’t interested in perjuring herself to help Doyle take down Bridges, the controversial Australian-born labor-union leader whom the entire West Coast seemed to be trying to get deported. But she was very interested in how he proposed to get her husband released. Ernest Ramsey’s conviction might have been a corrupt fraud, but a conviction was a conviction. So she played along a little, and asked him the question: How did he have the power to overturn a conviction and get Ernest sprung?

It was because, he told her, he was “a secret service agent for the Immigration Service and the governors of California and Oregon” — and he flashed a fancy gold badge that read, “SPECIAL AGENT — STATE OF OREGON — No. 280.”

Stanley Doyle was essentially a personal undercover operative answering directly and personally to the governor of Oregon — the ramrod-straight, demonstrably paranoid, ferociously anti-communist Major General Charles H. Martin (USA-Ret.), Governor of Oregon.

And although there was widespread consensus among the governors of all three West Coast states as well as the executives of every major shipping company on the subject, it was Martin who seemed to most hate Harry Bridges. At the very least, it was he who devoted the most taxpayer resources to the decades-long fight to have him deported — a goal that would have gotten a lot easier if he could be identified as a “red.”

Evidence today is pretty strong that Bridges had been a member of the Communist Party at one time, probably in the early 1930s. But in 1937, that evidence wasn’t yet known — but it was fervently wished for. And Stanley Doyle’s mission was clear: Either find or fabricate that evidence.

It was a mission he went about with a clumsy subtlety that would have shocked anyone who didn’t already know his methods. An attorney, he first came to the governor’s attention in 1934 as the prosecutor in the case of a man named Dirk DeJonge, a newly enrolled Communist Party member who, a few years earlier, had been prosecuted for making an anti-police speech at a Portland rally. This, of course, was an activity protected under the First Amendment, but the judge found him guilty and sentenced him to prison for it anyway.

Along the way to that outcome, though, some rather startling things happened, all on the record and in open court. First, undercover State Police agent Laurence Milner, who had provided the key information in the case, sought to preserve his cover by testifying in court that he didn’t know if DeJonge was a communist or not. Doyle, during a break in the case, tried to persuade him to change his mind and recant his testimony — basically, admitting to perjury — and when Milner refused, Doyle actually stated, in open court, that he had tried to get him to do so. So Milner had to get on the stand and perjure himself again to claim (with rather less believability this time) that he had not. Nonetheless, if any labor unionists ever trusted Milner again after that display, they surely deserved whatever they got as a result. His cover was effectively blown.

Harry Bridges testifies before Congress in 1939.

(As for DeJonge, his conviction was overturned by the Supreme Court two years later on grounds that throwing somebody into the cooler for making a speech was conduct unbecoming an American court of law.)

The following year, in his new role as “special agent,” Doyle blew the lid off another laboriously constructed piece of anti-union James Bondery when he traveled to California to get heavy with a man named Charles Bancksy, a private undercover agent working for a San Francisco shipping company. Bancksy had a beach house in Carmel stocked with hidden cameras and microphones and with a secret fingerprint lab; he hosted parties in it, in which he essentially dragnetted leftists trying to find evidence against Harry Bridges and other persons of interest. Doyle essentially ordered Bancksy to expose himself as a spy by testifying against Bridges; if he didn’t, Doyle would get him fired. Bancksy, quite naturally, figured he was as good as fired anyway if he let his cover be blown, so he declined — and, true to his word, Doyle got the governor to intervene and have him fired.

Doyle carried out other operations to suborn perjury using either cash bribes or threats throughout Gov. Martin’s term. By the end of it, though, he’d forged for himself such a terrible reputation that, according to a Department of Labor investigation in 1939, he’d “taken so much money from so many people” in bribes and payments for illegal services that any testimony he might have been able to offer would be useless.

Nor was Doyle the only rogue agent Martin’s administration employed. Convinced that what he faced was nothing less than a threat to the very existence of the American way of life, Martin was hiring almost anyone as a “special police” agent.

“My brother was appointed Special State Police Officer several months ago by you,” wrote William Schmitz of Portland in 1937. “My brother has no right to have this power, as he is irresponsible, inclined to be rattle-headed and is just as apt as not to shoot somebody for no just reason.”

Another “special agent” was stripped of his badge after he was caught using it to shake down an Italian businessman, whom he subsequently was prosecuted for pistol-whipping.

Meanwhile, Martin seemed completely oblivious to how all this was playing with the public. In 1938 he started gearing up for his re-election campaign. But by this time, most Oregonians — and not just the union members, either — had had enough, and Henry Hess had emerged as a strong opponent had arisen in the Democratic primary. The aging ex-governor Oswald West, who was still playing Karl Rove to Martin’s George W. Bush, realized that getting his guy re-nominated was going to be no mean feat. He engineered a clever gambit in which he encouraged conservative Republicans to switch parties to help.

This would likely have worked, but at the last minute came some direct intervention from the very top. On May 18, two days before the election, several members of the President Roosevelt’s “brain trust” released endorsements of Hess. Roosevelt himself, as was his wont at such times, remained coyly silent on the matter, other than to publicly deny Martin’s campaign claim that the president had told him, during a tour of the Bonneville Dam, “You and I make a good pair.”

Two days later, Martin was defeated in his primary. Bitterly and petulantly he blamed everything on malicious conspirators and envious pinko-libbs: “Hess, ... that son-of-a-bitch Elton Watkins ... and Dave Beck of the International Teamsters ... hatched their conspiracy ... to buy off the candidates then running against me so as to concentrate the labor vote ... and the subversive elements in the state headed by the so-called Commonwealth Foundation, against me,” he said, in a conference just after his defeat. In the election, Hess in turn was defeated by Republican Charles Sprague. After four years of strident squabbling between Martin’s furtive authoritarianism and the allegedly-communist trade-unionists, as far as most voters could see the Democratic Party was split between crazy socialists and paranoid fascists. The damage would linger for decades.

Days Creek boys send Irish to fifth straight loss

DAYS CREEK – The long-time south Douglas County rivalry between Riddle and Days Creek was renewed again on Tuesday evening, January 13, as the two teams squared off on the hardwood in a Skyline League battle.

After 32 minutes of intense play the Days Creek Wolves came out on top 64-49 sending Riddle to their fifth straight loss and a 0-3 league mark.

Days Creek got off to a slow start as both teams were a little cold from the floor but the Wolves did edge out the Irish in the first 14-11.

In the second quarter the Wolves exploded on offense as they poured in 29 while holding Riddle to just 16 to take a commanding 43-27 lead at the halfway point.

Days Creek came out in the third hot as Cam Stufflebeam hit on back-to-back three-pointers to open up a 22 point lead but the Irish clawed back into it and actually won the quarter 14-10 cutting the Days Creek lead to just 12 at 53-41 going into the final eight minutes.

In the fourth it was pretty much the same as the third as the Wolves jumped out then Riddle came roaring back before Days Creek settled things down.

The Wolves took the quarter 11-8 to bring the final tally to 64-49.

Leading the way for the Wolves on offense was Xane Hopkins who finished with a

OHA urges screening during Cervical Cancer Awareness month

PORTLAND — Oregon Health Authority is marking this year's Cervical Cancer Awareness Month with a reminder that cervical cancer is preventable and treatable, and vaccinations and screenings—including free screenings for people without insurance—protect against this deadly cancer.

OHA encourages people to get screened for cervical cancer, which includes Pap tests and human papillomavirus (HPV) tests that can find precancerous cell changes and detect cervical cancer early.

As many as 93 percent of cervical cancers could be prevented by cervical cancer screening and HPV vaccination.

When found early, cervical cancer is highly treatable and associated with long survival and good quality of life. But people should get screened for cervical cancer regularly, even if you received an HPV vaccine.

OHA also urges people to get the HPV vaccine. It can prevent new HPV infections, but it does not treat existing infections or diseases.

That's why the vaccine works best when given before any exposure to HPV.

The vaccine is recommended for all people through age 26, including boys and men.

Oregon's Screenwise Program helps to alleviate the burden cancer can cause and reduce health inequities in Oregon through education, screening, early detection, evidence-based care and access to medical treatment.

The program offers cervical cancer screening free of charge for people without insurance.

OHA urges people to schedule screenings with their providers. People without a provider should call 211 for assistance.

To learn more about Screenwise, and for more resources, go to the program's web page, or call 877-255-7070.

Cow Creek Spotlight

The Cow Creek Umpqua Tribe is very conscious of the heritage and achievements of the members of their local communities and are extremely proud to honor these hometown heroes for making a difference and aspiring to achieve.

Myrtle Creek Fire

The Myrtle Creek Volunteer Fire Department is involved with a number of fundraising efforts and community events in addition to being called out on fire calls at all hours of the day and night. One of their biggest projects is the annual Clothe-a-Child program where they provide $250 each for over 300 less fortunate south Douglas County kids to purchase new clothes just before Christmas each year. Thank you Myrtle Creek Fire Department volunteers for all that you do, and have done, for your community!
